Co. vs. Everett, one of the above plaintiffs, B. F. Bolles (defendant above), garnishee, and the answer of the Marshal sets up that of the firm. the defendant Bolles retained the sum of ment of the Court, and he submits whether of the execution, inasmuch as no levy was made by him in the first suit, and the garnishee served with process of garnishment, was bound by the statute to retain the amount in his hands at time of service to meet the judgment of Bishop & Co. vs. and oil taken by her.

The facts in regard to the service of the execution are as follows: The Marshal received the execution at forming him that he, the Marshal, should ment. On the 6th February laintiff's counsel said to defendant, "Mr. Parke need not collect that judgment till Puesday"; which day would be the 9th of On the 8th the garnishee process was served on the defendant. It seems that the consent of Everett and Rawlins' counsel to defer collection of the judgment against Bolles was made under the belief that Bolles' property was secured by the Marshal under the writ of execution.

If a complete legal levy was made by the Marshal, and the execution satisfied in full, there is no doubt that the garnishee, there would then be no "goods or effects" them, and the garnishee should not be com- Centre. pelled to pay his debts twice. It is also clearly settled that the property or money, when he left his home on the family farm in the official possession of the Marshal, if to try his fortune at sea, being only ninehe had collected the judgment, would be teen years of age. He left behind a lady exempt from garnishment, as being in the love, and he hoped to return some day and custody of the law.
